

Sophie-Yen Bretez

Sophie-Yen Bretez (b. 1994, Vietnam) is a self-taught emerging artist currently living and working in Paris. Bretez moved to France at a young age, providing her with a rich fusion of cultural heritage reflected in her multifaceted artistic practice. After completing a Grand École Masters at Neoma Business School in 2018, Bretez held multiple management positions throughout Paris before deciding to pursue her passion for art and creating full time in 2021.

Presenting a thematic fusion of autobiography and narrative identity, Bretez's oeuvre is marked by her signature dream-like surrealist figuration and skilful depiction of complex emotional states. Focusing on discovering ways in which to mirror the human condition in a state of recovery, Bretez's works often include an illuminated horizon line, stating that "I paint horizons for those who have suffered." By portraying her characters in semi-open spaces with a sunset or sunrise in the background, Bretez blurs the boundaries of the confined 'safe' space one builds for themselves in moments of weakness, ultimately highlighting the ambivalence of existence and the ambiguity of the human condition.

Bretez is also interested in challenging the traditional male gaze. She utilises reverse voyeurism and the evident nudity of her characters to challenge our societal relationship with the naked female body. Unflinching and strong, the women in Bretez's paintings stare directly at the spectator, serving to simultaneously create distance and prove they are not at the viewer's disposal — rather, they assert control of their own bodies.

As a natural storyteller, Bretez begins each painting with a poem linked to memory. Titling her works after these spontaneous and instinctual poems, Bretez incorporates an additional layer of dialogue between the work, the viewer, and herself. Bretez seeks to perpetuate a wider reflection of political, societal, philosophical, and existential themes, testifying to the intimate and universal through substantive narratives.
